CHEFON and lace lend a misty outline to the evening gown worn by Miss Pauline Frederick in "Innocent." They fall in long canvas folds, veiling but not concealing the shapely foundation of satin, swathe the neck and shoulders like a lovely cloud and are draped in back to form one of the new pointed trains. A length of satin is wound around the waist and hips, giving the waistless silhouette now so much desired.

THE South African monkey has offered his pelt to Miss Julia Sanderson, the dancing prima donna of "The Girl From Utah" at the Knickerbocker theater. This offering appears as a border to the wide band of black velvet on the skirt of the white chiffon frock and again in scalp fashion finishing the flat wide girdle. Also ornamenting the girdle is a large jet cabochon with pendants. The simple little corsage of the chiffon is almost childlike in its simplicity, crystal beads being the only trimming.

NEW POPE IS THE SECOND IN FAMILY

Innocent VII Was of Benedict XV's Mother's Branch of the Family.

cal policies, the secretary of state with his powerful friends and, perhaps, the votes and the influence of all German and Austrian cardinals.

It was perhaps due to these many obstacles in his way that the clergy and the civil authorities of the diocese of Bologna failed to escort the archbishop to the railroad station and wish him all success, as is the custom.

What happened within the treasured walls of the Sixtine will not be known for some time to come. One day when Benedict XV. will consider the time ripe, the necessary permission will be given and a new cardinal Mathieu will publish his diary of the conference, giving the details of the religious and diplomatic struggles that led the sacred college to vote for cardinal Della Chiesa.

Family Has Given One Pope.

Giacoma Della Chiesa was born in Genoa on November 21, 1854, and belongs to one of the oldest families of the Riviera. On his mother's side his family has already given to the church another pope, Celsino Migliorini, who was Innocent VII (1406-1409), while on his father's, the new pope is connected with nearly 30 aristocratic families of northern Italy, among whom are some of the most prominent society leaders of the capital, like marquis Durazzo, prince Centurione and count Sanseverino.

Of Benedict XV's boyhood days very little is known. His maternal uncle relates that he was a quiet, obedient lad who studied and seldom indulged in his companion's pastimes. One day, when only 12, the young marquis approached his father and told him pointblank that he wanted to be a priest. His father thought it over for a minute and then said:

"Very well, but first get your diploma and then renew your request." For eight years not a word more was said on the subject. The young man attended the school at Genoa, always distinguishing himself and at last entered the law faculty of the local university. His early inclination had been wholly forgotten by all when one day the young man returned home and lay on his father's desk the parchment stating that he was a full-fledged doctor of law, said:

"Now will you give me your consent to become a priest?"

The old marquis was thunderstruck. "Here stood before him a man slim figure of eight years ago, who steadily gave betrayed a strong determination. The careful survey of him carefully and then he said: "Of course, if you still think so."

That settled it. A few months later the young man entered the Capuchin college in Rome; there he took his minor orders, and later on the Nobles' academy, where he graduated as D. D. A few years later he returned to the academy as professor of diplomatic science.

With Leo XIII's death and Rampolla's failure to be elected pope, monsignor Della Chiesa's happy days at the state chancery came to an end. Although he still retained his position as cardinal del Velle substitute, yet his influence was gone and he was gradually put aside. The new elements, composed of trusted friends of the new secretary of state, were hostile to him chiefly for the fact that he retained for his purpose a devotion only equal to that for his mother. The new secretary of state knew that if Rampolla was gone, Della Chiesa represented in the state chancery Rampolla's tradition. Yet they did not dare remove him. His services, his advice, were still regarded as precious and besides a man of Della Chiesa's intellectual caliber could not be appointed to a minor position.

The opportunity of removing Della Chiesa came in 1908 when, following the death of cardinal Sava, the archbishopric of Bologna became vacant. In order to prevent criticism of all sorts, Pius X. decided to consecrate the new archbishop personally, but everybody understood that the idea was to send away from Rome one of Rampolla's devoted friends.

New Pope Poor. Benedict XV. although of noble lineage, is comparatively poor, and when the news reached him that he was to receive the red hat he was seriously embarrassed to meet the expenses. A committee of Bologna nobles was organized to present the new cardinal with some sort of souvenir and a large sum of money was collected. After a long consultation it was decided to present him with a motor car. Five thousand francs remained and the opinion of the cardinal was asked as to how it should be employed.

"Give it to me," said the cardinal promptly. "For I have been obliged to run into debt owing to my nomination." His cardinal's robes were presented to him by the marchioness Gares, of Genoa, who is one of his relatives.

Dislike the Tango. As a rigid moralist, Mr. Della Chiesa entertained a special dislike for dances of doubtful taste, more especially for the tango. He was the first bishop to condemn the tango in Italy and his pastoral letter warning the Bolognese not to indulge in the new dances preceded only a few days that issued by the vicar of Rome.
